

It is my resolve that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen the strength of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. Currently Indiana's law has been very effective in eliminating what I personally consider intrusions into my and my family's personal life. Whereas I used to receive 20 or more calls per week, now I receive very few, and these continue to be nuscience and not beneficial at all.

I consider the use, cost and maintenance of the telephone MY tool, not the conduit that others believe it is...if I so choose to use it to allow others to access me and mine, I will solicit it on my own, not have it legislated for me. I know what I want.
